Azadai Abbasi

Whenever we think of solitude, an idea of loneliness, sadness and worry surrounds us as if these are somehow interrelated or interlinked. However, to me the case is totally different as it means nothing that is described earlier as prerequisites of solitude. Infact, solitude and loneliness brings real joy and fun in my life as it is the time for me to rekindle memories of my childhood and immerse myself in the world of games and real joy. It is the time for me to play games and imagine myself as a character of that game. It gives me the chance to forget about myself and I think of myself as a character of the game. I find it as a really entertaining and creative way to utilize the time when I am alone. While playing games I could hardly think of anything that bored or saddened me. When I am playing games, my life is nothing but the character that I am playing. I feel like the goal of this game's character is my goal, the life of the character is my life. This unique association with my game's character is what I find most interesting and entertaining aspect of my life. That's where I find all the positivity, energy and joy in my life which I have tried to capture in my paintings by choosing miniature as a medium.

“People come into our lives for a reason, a season, or a lifetime.”

It is the idea that no matter how good, or how painful a role they played, they brought some meaning to our lives. This goes hand in hand with the concept of everything happening for a reason. From my childhood I have always taken instructions on what to do and it always created a big question in my mind as to why I have to follow such instructions.

In short, I feel that there need not be a reason for everything that is happening around us at all times. And in this context, I have, through my work, tried to portray my personal feelings and sensations no matter how painful at times these may be, without the need to conform to any expectations.

Nature is vital for us creatures as It gives life to a being and makes their survival possible. Likewise, for an artist lines play the vital role of nature to create his or her work.

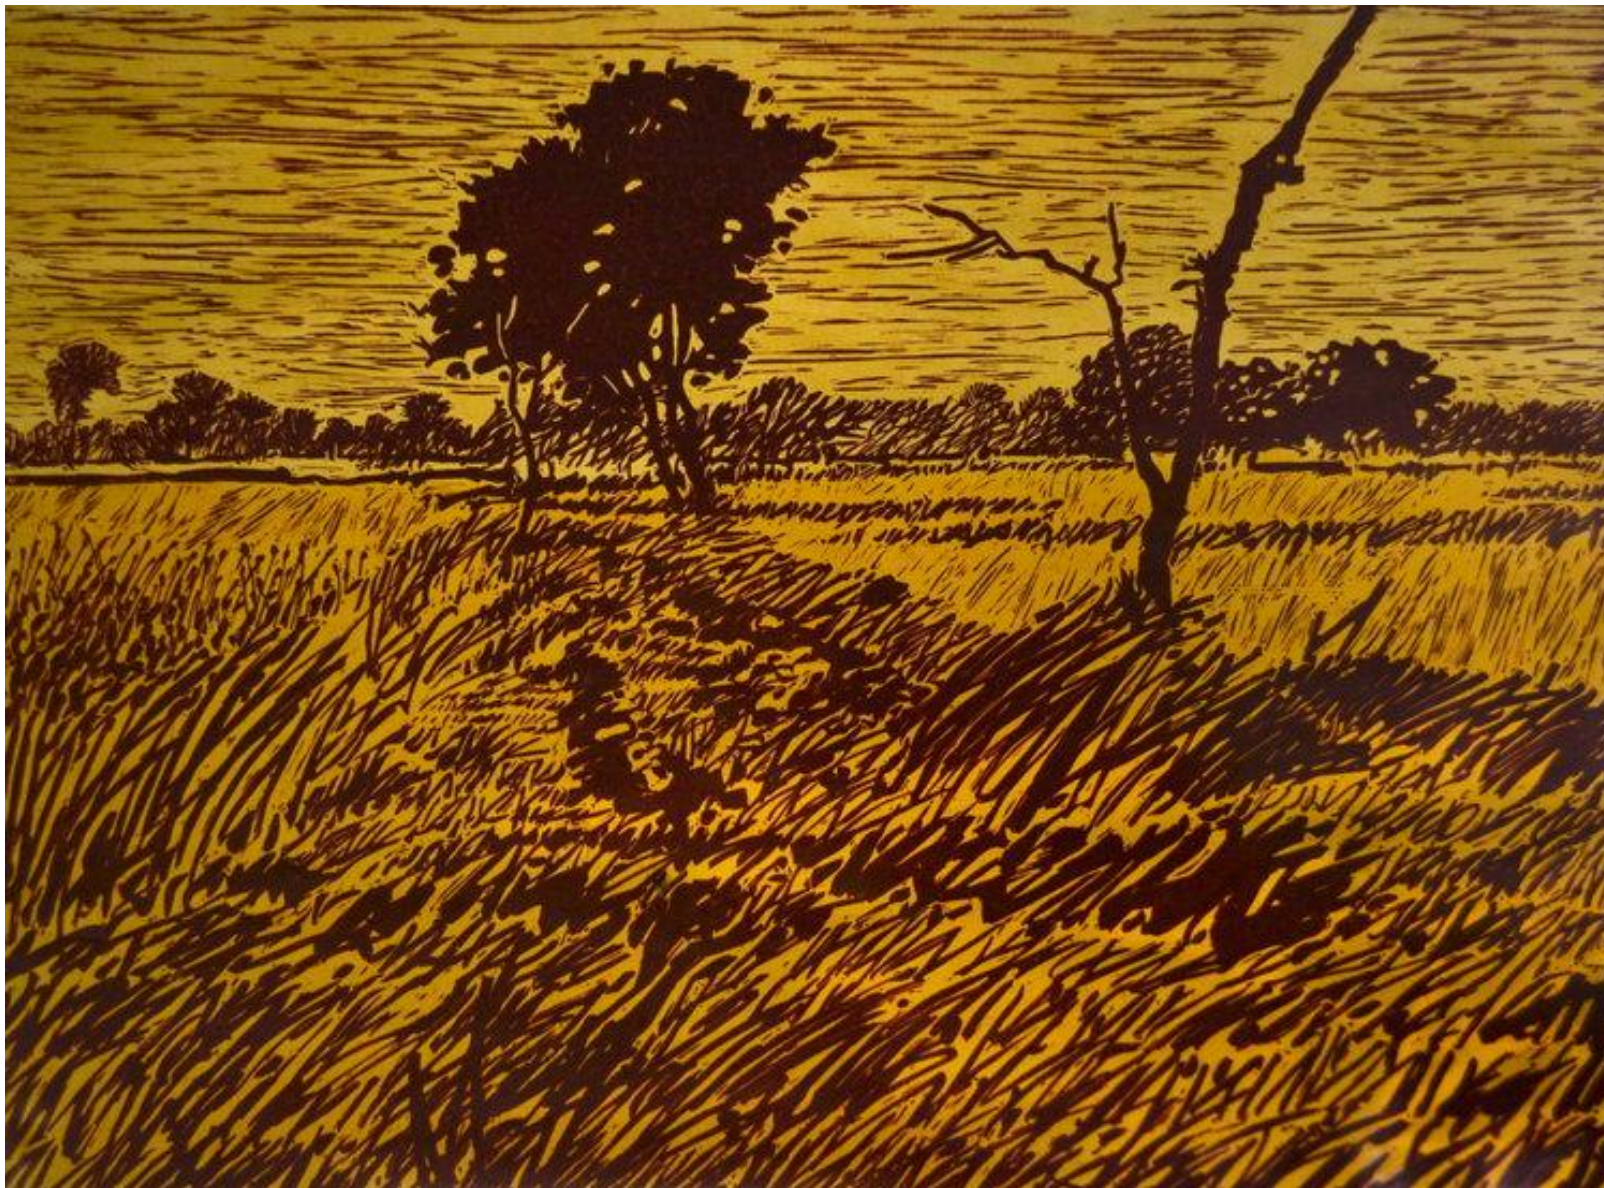

The focus of my work is lines; I have fused vitality of nature and lines to show importance of both entities. These prints explore various types of bold and hard lines creating aesthetic visual affect to the observers.

Mansoor

“Maan maan ahyan sab kujh maan ahyan“

I remember, when I was a child, people used to make me feel like I am an ordinary life and I can't do anything. Because of my short height I couldn't fulfill many of my dreams. I therefore, decided to make all my dreams come true through my paintings. I believe I am an extraordinary mind and I am not less than anyone. I have decided now to be what I am. I don't want to think about what people think about me. I am the “one and only” who matters the most to me. I am what I am and that is all what is important to me.

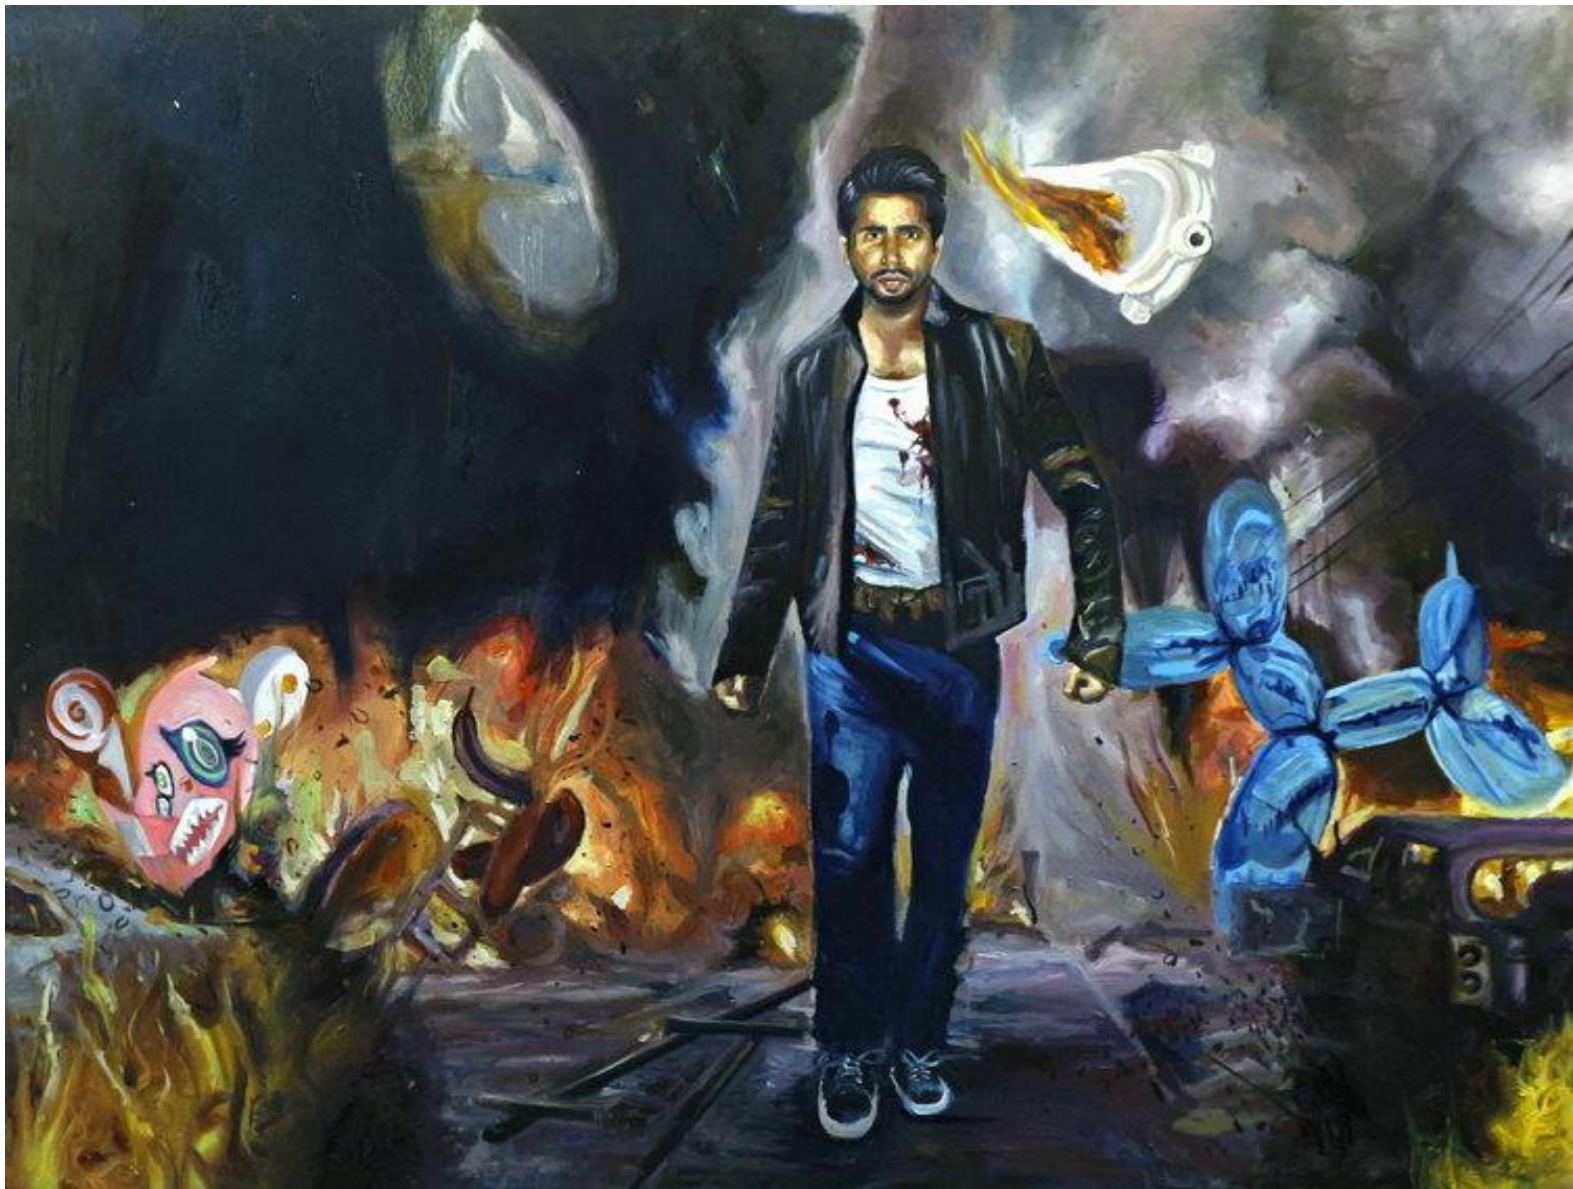

Mansoor, 36 x 48 Inch, Oil on Canvas, Figurative Painting, AC-MNR-005

Mohammad Ameen

“Memories of Childhood “

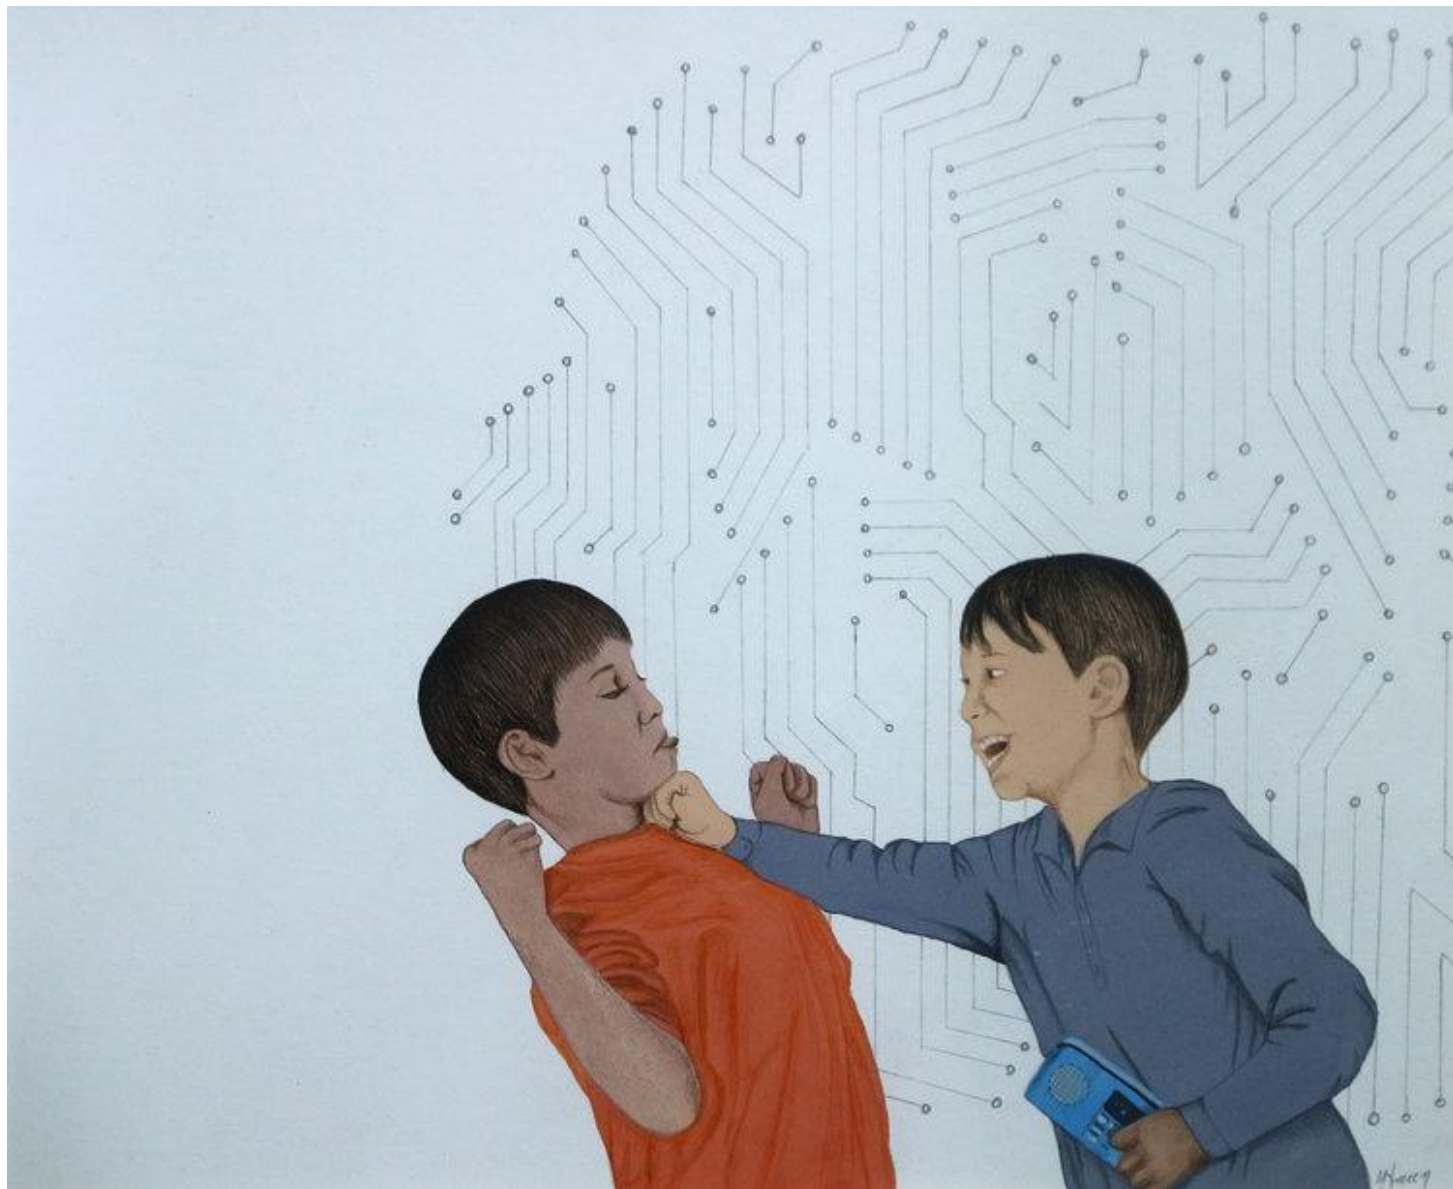

As a child, I use to hear so many voices from so many people telling me different things, different perspectives which I use to absorb in my own personal understanding of the same. But now influenced by my surroundings and forced by the teachings and experiences that I gained in my life, I feel and understand like others when deep inside of me I cannot bring myself to accept such forced understandings. Because of this attitude people find it hard to accept my perceptions and they do not understand that I am not wired the way everyone else is, in terms of perceiving their surroundings.

Muhammad Ali Supro

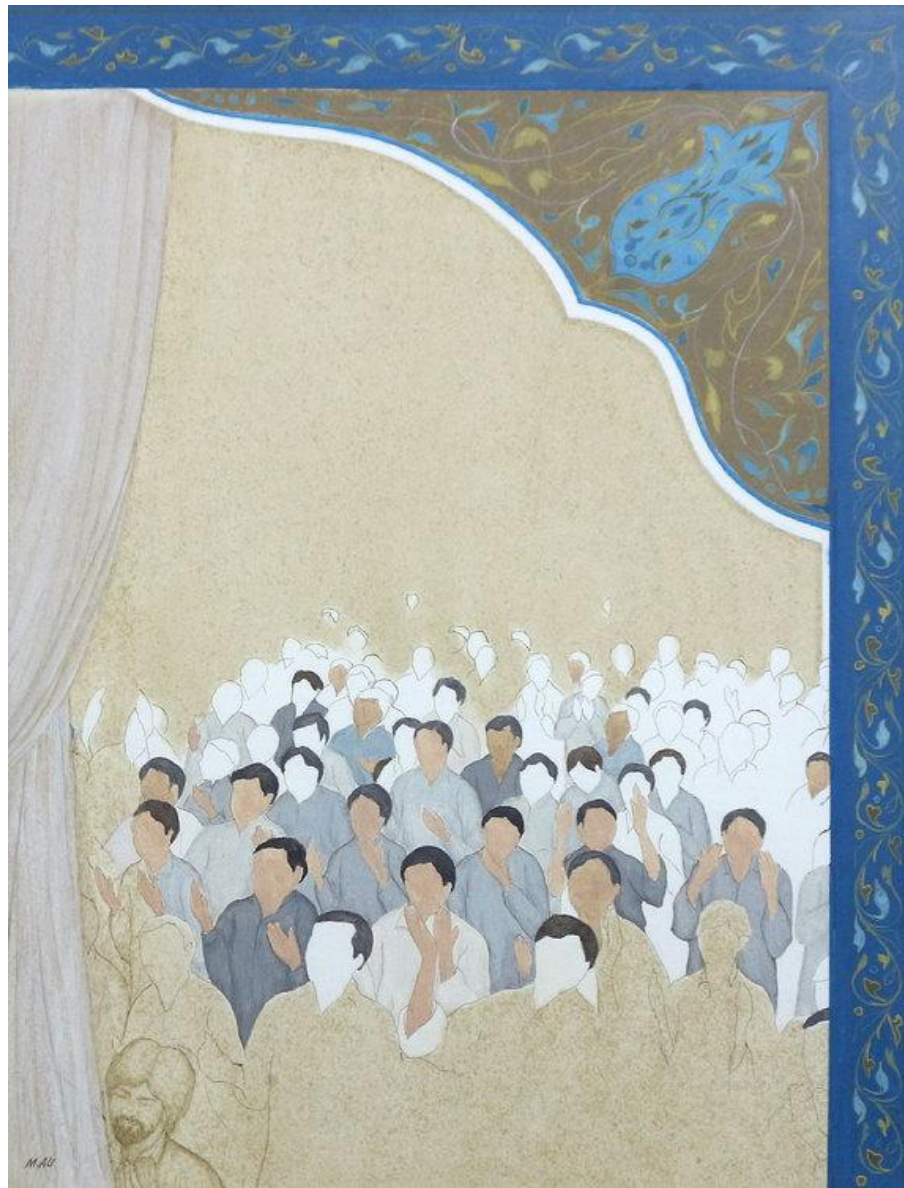

My Work is based on my thoughts and I have worked on the topic of ethics. My dialogue is on myself. I find myself surrounded by crowds where I am the center of interest. I am the focal point even though sometimes I may lose myself in the crowd. My body of work is miniature. In this series, I have tried to merge contemporary with traditional approach.

Muhammad Awais

This work is inspired by impressionism and expressionism. My work is purely based on landscapes.

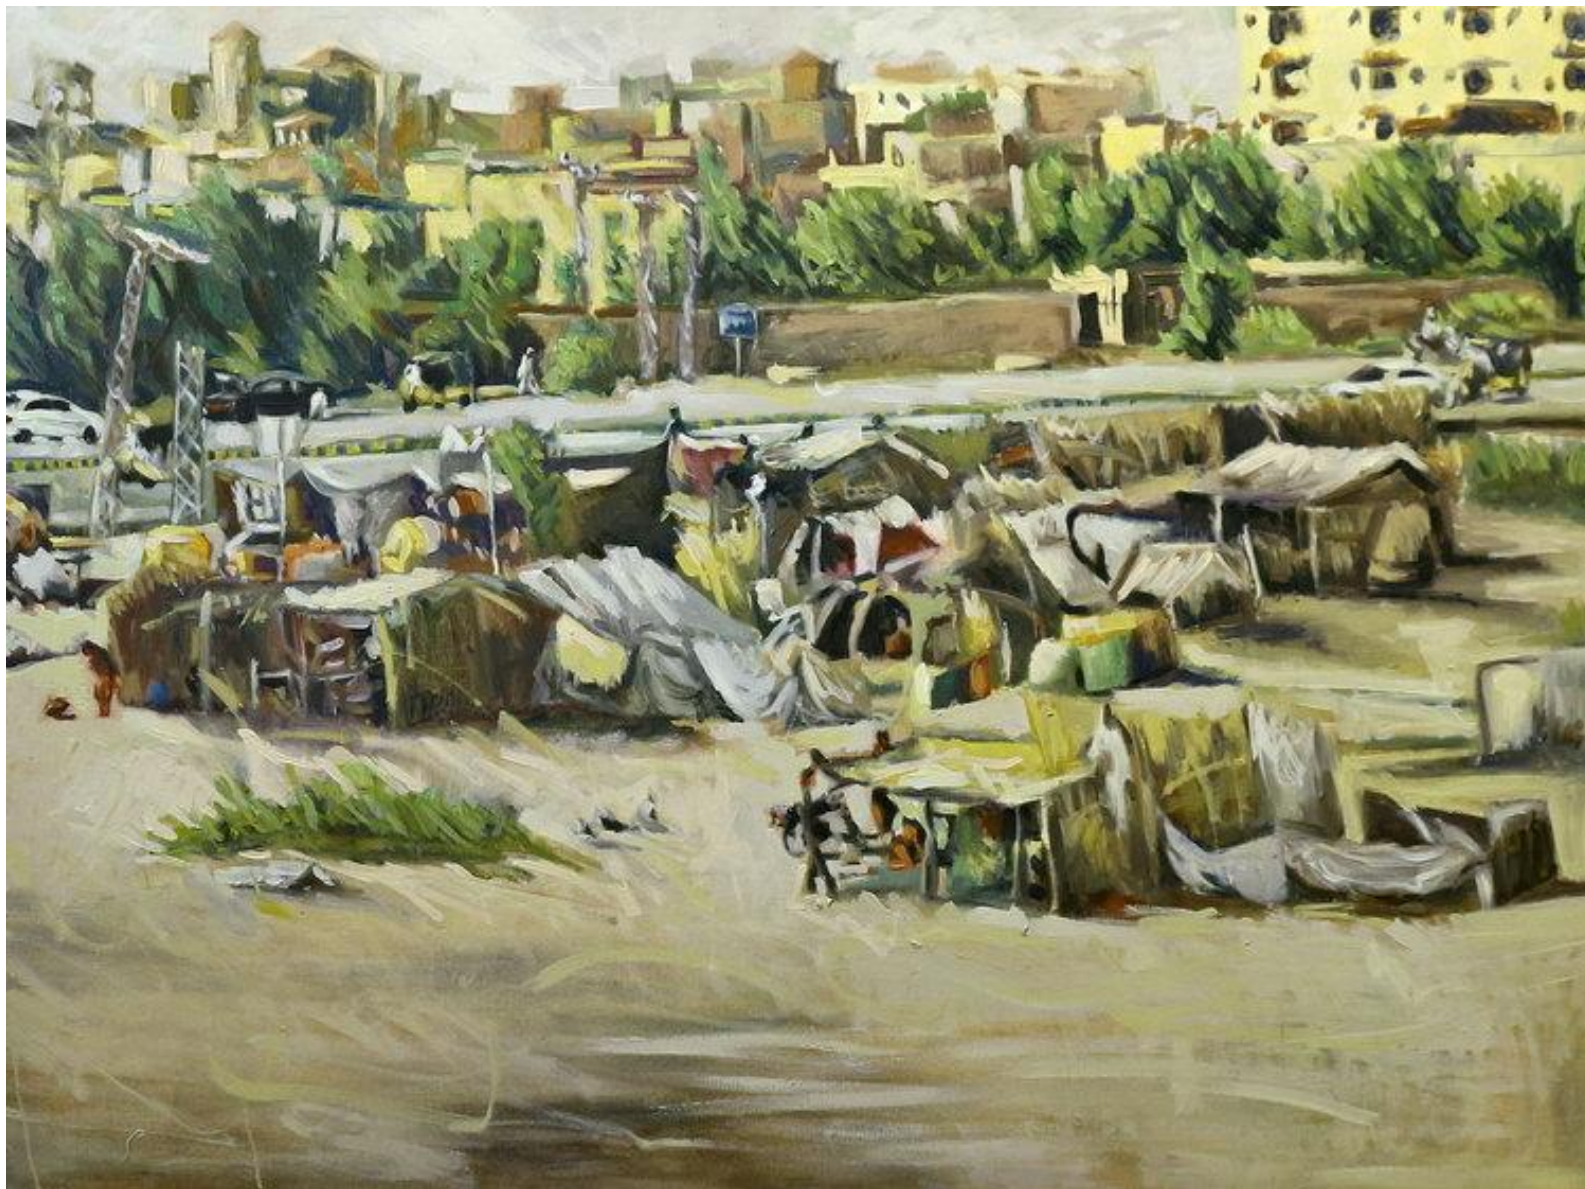

The colors merge with nature and seem to whisper to the viewer. My work is impressed by renowned landscape artists of the past that have left a lasting impact on me. All the paintings portray sceneries from my surroundings.
